Idea of the Seminar

The objective is to offer a comparative overview of participatory rights for citizens and, as their counterpart, the duties for the authorities in Germany and in Italy as Member States of the European Union as regards the protection of water. To explore the best practices related to participatory rights, we will compare legislation, administrative proceedings and case law as well as underlying theoretical concepts. King together on a comparative study. This reflects a new methodological approach in comparative law based on comparison through the lens of International and EU law.
